ETHNO-NATIONAL CONFLICTS: RESEARCH SOURCES

by Dr. Timothy L. Sanz
Foreign Military Studies Office, Fort Leavenworth, KS.
Originally published in European Security,
Vol. 3, No. 2 (Summer 1994), pp. 359-381

The New World Order has brought with it an unfortunate number of tragic conflicts that have pitted one ethnic group against another, most notably in the former Yugoslavia, but also in Nagorno-Karabakh, Moldova, South Ossetia, and Tajikistan. Other regions of Eastern Europe, the former Soviet Union, or Western Europe, although not currently experiencing actual armed conflict, could potentially experience ethno-national political upheavals, separatist movements or outright warfare in the future.

To aid researchers, scholars, governmental officials and others working on the issue of ethno-national conflicts, this bibliography brings together sources of information dealing with this critical topic of the 1990s. It lists citations to articles and books published only from the mid 1980s to the present. Part 1 covers analyses of the causes and ramifications of these conflicts, their management or resolution, legal and human rights issues, and military aspects of such conflicts. Part 2 contains citations dealing primarily with specific countries or regions. All citations are limited to European coverage with an emphasis on Eastern Europe and the former Soviet Union. The following subsections are included:

PART 1

- Section 1. Analyses of Causes, Ramifications
- Section 2. Conflict Resolution or Management
- Section 3. Legal and Human Rights Issues
- Section 4. Military Aspects

PART 2

- Section 5. Commonwealth of Independent States
  - A. Transcaucasia
  - B. Russian Federation or Former Soviet Union
  - C. Central Eurasia
  - D. Other C.I.S. countries
- Section 6. Eastern Europe and the Baltic Countries
- Section 7. Former Yugoslavia

Under each subsection the citations are listed alphabetically by author or by title if no author is indicated.
